McCARTHY BEACH STATE PARK is located in St. Louis County near Hibbing. Take U.S. Highway 169 north out of Hibbing to St. Louis County Road 5. Follow this county road 15 miles north to the park. Highway map index: K-7.

McCarthy Beach offers excellent water and land recreation. The park is between two major lakes; Sturgeon Lake and Side Lake. In and around the park, five additional lakes provide opportunities to fish for trout, walleye, and panfish. The park's terrain is that of rolling hills with many small valleys.

WILDLIFE: The park's hills and trails allow good bird and animal watching. Over 175 different species of birds visit the area. Visitors can see loons glide on lakes and great blue herons stalk small fish in the shallows. Thirty-three species of wildlife—deer, black bear, timber wolf, chipmunk, red squirrel, raccoon—and several species of reptiles and amphibians inhabit the park. Please remember that these animals are wild. Enjoy the animals, but do not approach or feed them.

GEOLOGY: Creeping glaciers over 1,000 feet high gouged and tore at the region's bedrock (the cooled lava of ancient volcanoes). The glaciers flowed south, retreated north, and flowed south again. The first glacier stopped where McCarthy Beach is now located. It left low, rolling hills with steep sides called moraines—actually accumulations of boulders, stones and other debris. Between the hills, the glaciers gouged valleys. In the larger valleys, lakes were formed.

Trails from McCarthy Beach lead visitors along the ridge tops of the park's moraines. There, visitors can imagine the titanic forces that moved and shaped the region. These trails are used year-round. Summer hiking trails are used in winter for snowmobiling and for cross-country skiing.

HISTORY: Giant red and white pines reached as far as the eyes of early settlers could see. One homesteader could spend years just logging a single 40-acre tract. These old giants attracted loggers to the Sturgeon Lake area.

Two men named Hibbing and Trimble started the first sawmill at the townsite of Hibbing. Wood from the mill built this booming mining town.

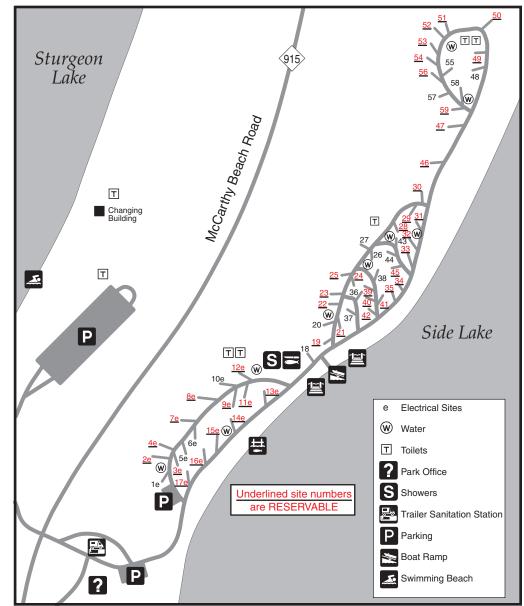

In 1895, the Swan River Logging Company owned by Wright and Davis of Saginaw, Michigan, built a railroad to Sturgeon Lake. Logging started around this time. The railroad hauled the logs to the Swan River. There they were driven to the Minneapolis sawmills via the Mississippi River.
