WILD RIVER STATE PARK is located 14 miles east of I-35 (Exit 147) off State Highway 95 and County Road 12. State highway map index: K-14.

GENERAL INFORMATION: Wild River is one of the larger state parks in Minnesota. It was established to protect the natural and cultural resources and to provide recreational opportunities along the St. Croix River. The park's name, "Wild River", is derived from the fact that the St. Croix River was one of the eight rivers originally protected by the U.S. Congress through the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act of 1968. Wild River was authorized by the legislature in 1973 and was officially opened in October 1978. Nearly 5,000 of the park's 6,803 total acres were donated by Northern States Power Company.

GEOLOGY: Wild River's landscape was formed by three major forces. Lava from volcanoes active 1.1 billion years ago formed the area's buried basalt bedrock. Today, this basalt forms the high cliffs of the Dalles of the St. Croix and the river's basin. Over one million years ago, glaciers up to a depth of one mile covered the region. 10,000 years ago the melting of the last glacier formed glacial lakes Duluth and Grantsburg. These lakes supplied the water power to create the present St. Croix Valley. The park lies within the Mille Lacs Uplands ECS Subsection. This region is in the transition zone of pine forest, hardwood forest, and oak savanna.

HISTORY: The St. Croix Valley was first occupied by nomadic people 6,000 years ago. For hundreds of years the valley was home for the Dakota and the Ojibwe. Samuel's Fur Post and Connor's Goose Creek Post were active in 1847. After Minnesota became a territory in 1849 a military road was constructed through the park. It was part of a route from St. Paul to Lake Superior and a portion is still evident today. The towns of Sunrise and Amador were founded in the 1850s. The great white pine logging era resulted in the building of Nevers Dam in 1890 which operated until 1912.

VEGETATION AND WILDLIFE: The broad sweep of the upper St. Croix River Valley is home for a variety of birds, animals and plant life. The park's second-growth forest and open meadows provide habitat for large numbers of white-tailed deer. Marshes offer both food and protection for ducks, herons and bitterns. The valley is a good hunting ground for raptors like marsh hawks, bald eagles and barred owls. Wildflowers are abundant throughout the spring and summer months. Prescribed burns are conducted to better manage prairie and oak savanna areas.

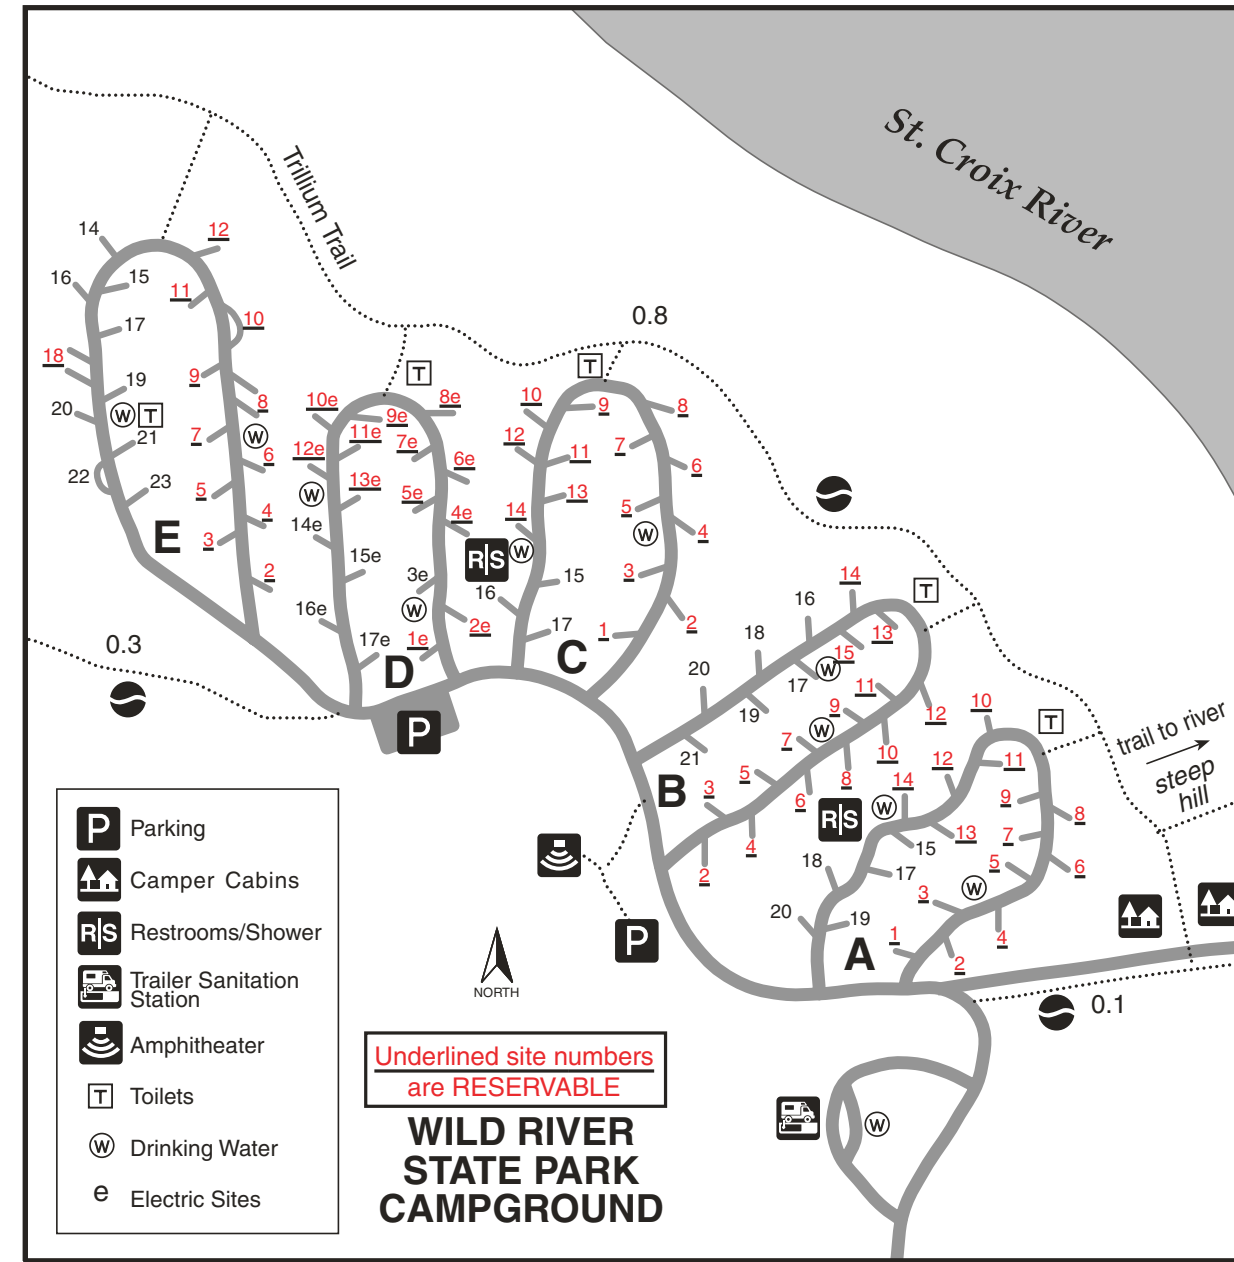

CANOEING: Canoeists will enjoy the primitive beauty of the St. Croix River Valley. Sightings of bald eagles, great blue herons and white-tailed deer are common. Red-shouldered hawks and ospreys may also be seen. River users should exercise caution. High water levels during the spring and after heavy rainfall result in swift currents. Anglers will find a variety of fish to test their skills including smallmouth bass, northern, walleye, and catfish.

TRAILS: Thirty-five miles of trails are available for hikers and cross-country skiers, including a 2.5 mile handicap-accessible Universal Trail. There are two self-guided trails: Amik's Pond and Windfall. Twenty miles are designated for horseback riding. Most trails are fairly level with few steep grades. Some trails may receive minimum maintenance due to wet conditions. The trails go through diverse habitats that bring you within close range of wildlife.

INTERPRETIVE PROGRAM: A year-round naturalist program offers seasonal events such as maple syruping demonstrations, birdwatching, landscaping for wildlife, outdoor hikes, prairie restoration activities, snowshoeing, animal tracking and candlelight skiing. The McElroy Visitor Center overlooking the St. Croix Valley features a unique weather station, ecological and wildlife displays, historical and cultural exhibits, slide programs, and a wildflower garden.
